Mother Caring for 7 Billion (2017)

Examines the challenges we face in a world of 7 billion. It tells the story of an American mother and child's right activist, and her journey to make sense of how and why the empowerment of women and girls around the world is so intricately linked to our fate on the planet. World-renown experts help explain one of the most persistent controversies in our culture that touches gender equity, religion, reproductive health and the environment. (70 min)

Discussion Facilitators:

Dr. Richelle Winkler, Dept. of Social Sciences and
Dr. Kelly Kamm, Dept. of Kinesiology and Integrative Physiology

Cosponsored by Lake Superior Stewardship Initiative, Michigan Tech Great Lakes Research Center, Keweenaw Land Trust, Keweenaw Unitarian Universalist Fellowship, Sustainable Futures Institute, and MTU Dept. of Social Sciences
